
Downloaded from: http://insight.cumbria.ac.uk/2160/

Usage of any items from the University of Cumbria’s institutional repository ‘Insight’ must conform to the following fair usage guidelines.

Any item and its associated metadata held in the University of Cumbria’s institutional repository Insight (unless stated otherwise on the metadata record) may be copied, displayed or performed, and stored in line with the JISC fair dealing guidelines (available here) for educational and not-for-profit activities provided that

• the authors, title and full bibliographic details of the item are cited clearly when any part of the work is referred to verbally or in the written form

• a hyperlink/URL to the original Insight record of that item is included in any citations of the work

• the content is not changed in any way

• all files required for usage of the item are kept together with the main item file.

You may not

• sell any part of an item

• refer to any part of an item without citation

• amend any item or contextualise it in a way that will impugn the creator’s reputation

• remove or alter the copyright statement on an item.

The full policy can be found here. Alternatively contact the University of Cumbria Repository Editor by emailing insight@cumbria.ac.uk.
The Leading Wellbeing Research Festival in the Lake District, July 2015

Up! up! my Friend, and quit your books; Or surely you'll grow double:

Up! up! my Friend, and clear your looks; Why all this toil and trouble?

...Books! 'tis a dull and endless strife: Come, hear the woodland linnet,

How sweet his music! on my life, There's more of wisdom in it.

These verses from the Lake District poet William Wordsworth, written over two hundred years ago, reflect the spirit of the Festival starting on July 16th in the UK’s Lake District, organised by the Brathay Trust and the Institute for Leadership and Sustainability (IFLAS).

Scholarship is great, but immersing in nature and refreshing our creative desires is key for developing practical wisdom. The festival will be an exploration of ideas and also format, by mixing engaged scholars with radical professionals from across sectors and cultures. The aim is for a maximum mix of people, ideas and processes with few frills. Lifeworth has supported the event with IT services. As the academic chair of the Festival, I’m chuffed we will be welcoming scholars presenting over 40 papers, and speakers who are participating without charge, some coming from across continents.

We are aiming for interaction and reflection, with the Open Space, World Cafe, Open Mic and Storytelling sessions, amongst provocative plenaries and interviews. I’m looking forward to hearing philosopher Charles Eisenstein, actor Nandita Das and author Nicole Schwab. Underlying the range of sessions is the deeper question: “How might I lead greater wellbeing?”

It is an important question, because while more people speak of sustainability, the environmental news is really bad. While more people work on wellbeing, austerity bites and few address the power relations that undermine opportunities for collective wellbeing. While more people call for leadership, we risk forgetting the need for us all to lead together.
But tough issues don’t have to be explored in a tough or dull way. We can enjoy getting to know people on a deeper level as we explore whether to let go of our old stories of success and wellbeing, and where that will lead our work and life. That kind of fresh thinking likes fresh air, so we have organised a range of outdoor activities for participants… in the forest, on the lake, on the lawn.

The festival is also a celebration. I love what Brathay Trust does day-to-day in promoting young people’s wellbeing. We want to share the beauty of the Lake District, which inspires through the cultural heritage and contours of the landscape. It can be argued that contemporary conservation was born in the Lake District in the 1800s. Today, nearly 3 years after IFLAS was conceived, with around 2000 students from over 100 countries, it is time to share the IFLAS approach to sustainability leadership more widely.

So, Up, Up, friends, come join us for these days of exploration: www.leadingwell.org

Jem Bendell

Professor of Sustainability Leadership, University of Cumbria
Founder of IFLAS (www.iflas.info) and Lifeworth

Tags: IFLAS, leadership

Featured Publications

- The Corporate Responsibility Movement

  * No bookmarks avaliable.
• Working with

[Image]

• Most Read

- News on the Authentic Luxury Network
- World's 1st benchmarking of ethical performance of luxury jewellery
- Elegant Disruption - how luxury and society can change each other for good
- Video Interview with Director of UNPRI
- Too busy to keep up with the CSR job scene?

• Search for: [Search]

• Topics

annual review  asia  asian  csr  authentic luxury network  awards  capital accountability  carbon charge  climate  community currencies  creativity revolution  csr  design thinking  economic governance  fashion  financial crisis  Geneva  Global Compact  Hannah Tariq  Ian Doyle  India  James Gifford  Jem Bendell  jobs  journal of corporate citizenship  leadership  luxury  NGO  Offices  Pakistan  partnership  poverty  responsible finance  responsible investment  responsible lobbying  sea change radio  social movement  Sustainable luxury  systemic change  terms for endearment  the corporate responsibility movement  UN  UNCTAD  UNPRI  walpole  World Economic Forum

Copyright © 2008-2012 Lifeworth Consulting & The Swiss Institute, nonprofit association based in Geneva (CH-660.1.225.004-8)