To solve the problem of no services for exercise activities for people with dementia in Workington

The aim of the research project

- To examine the feasibility and acceptability of holistic exercise as a physical activity for people with dementia

The study

- A specialized exercise programme called “Happy Antics” designed for people with dementia
- Designated tasks to colleagues
- Holistic approach
- 45 min sessions once a week for 6 weeks
- Sessions: cognitive exercise, warm up, exercise sets, cooling-down, guided meditation
- Semi-structured interviews

The findings

- Adherence 70%
- Observations of memory recall, maintained procedural memory and acceptance of meditation
- Enjoyment, relaxation, keeping active, social interaction, pain relief, learning something new, intention to continue
- Beneficial to people with dementia
- Beneficial to carers

Achieved outcomes

- Specialized exercise programme was developed for people with dementia [consistent with NICE's clinical guideline (2006)]
- Evidence for the feasibility and acceptance of holistic exercise for people with dementia
- The Happy Antics programme was able to stimulate and engage people with dementia in exercise as well as provide a social learning environment and offer potential psychological benefits
- Published in Journal of Bodywork & Movement Therapies

Latest update on Happy Antics

- Media release by Elsevier on 19th May 2014
- Expressions of interest from medical journalists, sports researchers & general public
- Possible link to UCLA's dementia programme
- Introductory session at a care home in Cockermonth (to include people not diagnosed with dementia)

Future work

Thank you
